AMUSEMENTS.

"Hazel Kirske" at the Opera House last night.

"Hazel Kirske" was presented at the opera house last night very creditably by the New York Theatre company. Lillian Mortimer appeared in the title role and acted very nicely. Ella Woolcott as "Dolly Dutton" is deserving of especial mention. The climax and floor was reached when she fell into the clothes basket. The play tonight is "The Pearl of Savoy."

Manufacturing.

To promote and encourage manufacturing is the most important duty of this community, aside from the enforcement of law and the preservation of order. The increase of population depends upon that. Build up manufacturing plants and that will attract people; these people will make a demand for houses and lots, both as owners and as tenants.

In order to secure manufacturing capital we must be ready and willing to supplement and join it with our own energy and capital. We must show our faith by our works and what we invite and advise others to do we must ourselves do with others.

There are signs of rising sap—the flowers of Spring are blooming—enterprise and energy are manifesting themselves—let us take the tide at its flood.—Norfolk Landmark.

A Creditable Comparison.

Mr. Hinton Hieper, the well-known Southern journalist, and at present representing the New York Sun in the South, speaks of Southwest Virginia and Roanoke in this strain:

Southwest Virginia, by her favorable location, her resources and possibilities, her nearness to the consuming and producing markets of the world, holds the banner flag in the way of future growth and material development.

Why? Because the growth here has been substantial and not of a mushroom character.

Because the industries formulated are wide and varied in their character, as well as firm and solid in their operations.

Because the wealth of natural resources are more abundant. Because the advantages are more varied and the possibilities greater. The prospective conditions of the people in Southwest Virginia today prove the answer to the problem of the above statements. In this section are to be seen the fruits in their lucious, healthy and sweetest form, the products of the soil, the fruits of the earth, which give bone and sinew
